Sammy Reshevsky—America's New Champion

 This was just as Mr. Rosenwald had wanted it.

"During the intervening years, Mr. Rosenwald invited us regularly as his guest at his Ravinia home. Nathan Rubin, Sam's schoolmate, who even shared Sam's locker during their years at high school and later at the University of Detroit, and who has since become junior champion of America at checkers and is now one of the four best checker players in the world, was requested by Mr. Ros-enwald to join us in our annual visits. It was indeed a privilege to enjoy the hospitality of the Rosenwald home. It gave one a real opportunity to observe the splendid and humane qualities that characterized every action and thought of this remarkable friend. Just let me cite a few incidents.

"On our first visit, a delicious dinner was prepared. When he discovered that Sam would not partake of the food because of his Orthodoxy and because of his desire to observe Kashruth—the Jewish dietary laws—Mr. Rosenwald saw to it that special food was given to Sam and many of the dinners later were especially prepared for him.

"In 1929, Mr. Rosenwald arranged for us to see the opera with him at Ravinia. It took place on a Friday evening. We drove there from his home while it was still light. After the performance, Sam proposed walking back to the Rosenwald home, about a mile distant, because he preferred not to ride on the Sabbath. Mr. Rosenwald told our party he would walk back with Sam. I can still see the two leaving the opera and walking along the road arm in arm, while the rest of us seated ourselves comfortably in the fine cars Mr. Rosenwald had provided. Mr. Rosenwald was not robust and it was evident the walk had tired him. Yet on his return, he appeared happy, knowing that he had shown deference to the religious observance of his young guest."

Mr. Steinberg recalls how in the summer of 1931, Sammy Reshevsky, during his visit in the Rosenwald home, played a game of chess with Lessing and William Rosenwald. Julius Rosenwald, from his sick bed, learned of Sam's presence, and from his sick room sent the boy a flower with kind remembrances and regards.

On February 19, 1929, when he graduated from high school, Sam Reshevsky received the following letter from Mr. Rosenwald:

"My Dear Sam: Permit me to congratulate you upon the event which you are celebrating, namely, your graduation with honors from high school. It gave me much pleasure to learn of this as well as your matriculation at the University of Detroit. Your good friends Mr. Steinberg, Mr. Butzel, Mr. Dushkin and others who have been so devoted in their attention to you will, I am sure, be as happy as I am over your progress. This brings to you my cordial and best wishes for continued work.

"It was also a great satisfaction to know that your father is more contented and gradually adjusting himself better to American surroundings. "Julius Rosenwald"

PLAIN TALK

 Both Levy and Smith have come to see that there is no salvation for them that is separate from mankind's; that their pains derive from the pains of the world and are not to be cured separately.

Levy remembers his morning prayer: "Heal us, O Lord, and we shall be healed; save us and we shall be saved. Vouchsafe a perfect healing to all our wounds; for Thou, almighty King, art a faithful and merciful Physician."

He used to think only of his personal wounds when he said this prayer: His sorrows, his disappointments, his losses. But he knows now that these are small aches amid the agony of mankind. If he gives his mind to religion it is to consider a Judaism that marches for social righteousness and a God Who functions through justice.

Thus, too, does Smith think of Christianity. It seems to me that in the minds of Levy and Smith are the germs of religion's survival.

Oscar I. Harter to Conduct Mexican Tour

Mr. Oscar Harter, Pittsburgh High School teacher, will escort a party to romantic Old Mexico. En route, they will stop at Dallas to visit the Texas Centennial Exposition, and will also stop off at Antonio.

One of the most romantic, picturesque, and paradoxical countries in all the world that a traveler could wish to see lies close at hand. That country is Mexico, our neighbor south of the Rio Grande.

The Sierra Madre mountains . . . Old Popo and Ixtaccihuatl, the "Sleeping Lady," covered with snow the year round. Deep chasms, winding roads that go over the timber-line . . . peaceful Indian villages in green valleys. There's no more captivating scenery in the Alps or anywhere else.

And for temperature, the Mexico you'll visit is located on a high plateau and though in the topics will be delightfully cool. Average summer temperature is 71 degrees. And of course traveling is done in Air Conditioned Pullman Cars.

For information call or write 5508 Wilkins Avenue, Schenley 0514.
